Why did the lawyer choose 15 years instead of 5?

The lawyer felt very strongly about his point of being put into jail for the time is better than just dying. I think that he had felt so strongly about this so he really wanted to prove his point. And that could be why he wanted to go into this imprisonment for a longer amount of time.

What does that prove? - Why?

15 years is a much longer time span. I think that being in this locked up lodge for 15 years is more of an experience to see what the survival is like.

Why?

I think this because it gives someone more time to explore. For example with the lawyer - he had 15 years to look and read those books. ~~books~~ looping

The books are I think what kept him alive. I think they are what made him stay alive to keep exploring. Like it says in the story at the part of his letter, "For fifteen years I have been intently studying earthly life." He got this from all of the books he read. This quote shows that for all of those years he was only been studying. This study especially when he found new ideas to study about it made him become more interested. Once he knew what his purpose was with studying more and becoming smarter to use his time for something good, the lawyer knew he couldn't die and give up. The books had changed him. He writes, "Your books have given me wisdom." The books made him smarter. I think

From now knowing so much about everything his views changed. For example he doesn't want the 2 million dollars any more. When he was young and foolish he only cared for the money. But over the years his wisdom grew so he did ~~know~~ more about only caring for money.

I think there could be a couple of reasons why he didn't accept the money. One could be because he knew money wasn't the most important thing in the world. He learned the wisdom and being smart is. And that can earn you money. Another reason why he might have not taken the money is because he knew how much it would make the banker suffer and he didn't want to do that. I also think there could be one more reason: that is that he had already
